DETAILED ACTION

1. This Office Action is responsive to the Amendment filed on 05/23/05

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

2. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

3. Claims 1, 3, 5, and 7 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Brittan et al ("Brittan", USP 6199078).

Regarding claim 1, Brittan teaches a system 10 for enabling entry and display data in a database, the system comprising a processor 18 for controlling the display of a form (see "Microsoft Excel – Book 18" of Fig. 4 or Fig. 12) (col. 2, lines 55-58) having a number of data fields corresponding to data items stored on a database (fields capable of storing a plurality of values) (col. 2, lines 55-58; col 5, lines 5-21), and a store for storing, for at least one data field, information enabling attributes (formulas and setters) relating to a data item stored on the database corresponding to the data field to be displayed upon user command (double clicking the mouse) while the form continues to be displayed (Fig. 12); wherein the at least one data field corresponds to a data item (data field corresponds to formulas and setter values) and the stored information defines one or more data items stored on the database other than the data item corresponding to the at least one data field (col. 5, lines 22-35) (col. 12, lines 26-35).

Art Unit: 2173

Regarding claim 5, Brittan teaches a system for enabling entry and display data in a database, the system comprising a processor 18 for controlling the display of a form (see "Microsoft Excel – Book 18" of Fig. 4 or Fig. 12) (col. 2, lines 55-58) having a number of data fields corresponding to data items stored on a database (fields capable of storing a plurality of values) (col. 2, lines 55-58; col 5, lines 5-21) and a store for storing, for at least one data field, information defining a computation (formulas and setter values) to be performed based on the data values obtained from the database wherein results of the computation are to be displayed upon user command (double clicking the mouse) while the form continued to be displayed (col. 12, lines 26-35) (see Formula Lists, Fig. 12).

Regarding claims 3 and 7, Brittan teaches the providing a user interface to enable a user to define information which is stored in the store corresponding to the at least one data field (col. 3, lines 50-55) (line 64 of col. 3 to line 6 of col. 4) (also see col. 5, lines 65-67).

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

4. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

5. Claims 4 and 8 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Brittan and Johnson (USP 5721847).

Regarding claims 4 and 8, Brittan does not teach that the user command is a right click of the mouse. However, such feature is known in the art as taught by Johnson. Johnson teaches a method for inserting a selected graphic control within a spreadsheet which comprising the opening a drop-down menu upon user's right-mouse click (col 7, lines 23-27). It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art, having the teaching of Brittan and Johnson before him at the time the invention was made, to modify the interface system taught by Brittan to include the opening a drop-down menu upon user's right-mouse click taught by Johnson with the motivation being to enable the user to easily and conveniently activate command by a single mouse click.

Response to Applicant's Arguments

6. Applicant's arguments filed 05/23/05 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive.

In response to Applicant's arguments that "Brittan does not disclose or suggest any relation between the method and system of Brittan and a database" and Brittan does not disclose or suggest application of the method and system to a database, and indeed, does not even mention a database", it is noted that such is not quite the case. According to Merriam-Webster's Collegiate Dictionary (Tenth Edition), database is a large collection of data organized especially for rapid search and retrieval (as by a computer). Although Brittan does not explicitly use the word "database" in the reference, Brittan's teaching indeed discloses the application of Brittan's system to a database. Firstly, Brittan's system calculates values for data network (col 2, lines 42-45), therefore, the system handles a large collection of data. Secondly, the data network includes collection of fields, each field represents a data value, therefore, data in Brittan's system is organized. Thirdly, Brittan's system comprises a computer (see Fig. 1) which enables data retrieval (col 3, lines 30-48 and col 4, 2-6).

Thus, Brittan's system enables entry and display data in a database as claimed.

7. THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
